Dear John,

I was excited to discover the opportunity to become a social worker in Des Plaines. As a 4.0 GPA graduate of the Social Work Master's program at the University of Chicago, with over 200 hours in an in-field practical placement at the Chicago Department of Health, I have the necessary foundation to learn from you and your colleagues on how to best impact the Des Plaines community for the better.

During my studies at the University of Chicago, I have chosen the college modules that focus on working with vulnerable children, such as Child Psychology, Developmental Psychology, and Crisis Management, as it was always my intention to help those who are in crisis during the most important, formative period of their life. During my faculty-guided placement at the Department of Health, I have been able to contribute to over 15 cases, from completing assessments, investigations, and even provided testimony during one judicial hearing. I am well versed in every stage of the casework, and eager to learn more by working real cases in your community.

Paradoxically, we often confide the most in complete strangers — this is a well-known psychological fact. Working as a social worker in Des Plaines would not only be an opportunity for me to learn and grow, but also a benefit to the people of Des Plaines — I come from close enough to understand how these people think and live, but also from far enough to be a complete stranger that people are willing to confide in.

Can we schedule a call to discuss how my skills would best be applied to help the young and vulnerable of Des Plaines?

Best Regards,
Ronald S. Moore
